Tree Phenology Guide

How to use this guide

At SeasonWatch (www.seasonwatch.in), we often get queries on identifying the different seasonal stages of mature trees. In an attempt to make recognising stages of trees easier, we have created this text-free pictorial guide!

In this guide, we have provided reference images for phenophases - new leaf, mature leaf, dying leaf, flower bud, open flower, male/female flowers, unripe fruits, ripe fruits and open fruits - as appropriate, for the 171 species on the SeasonWatch list.

This guide is not designed to help you identify the species; however, it is possible to ID species based on leaf, flower and fruit characteristics. If you are unable to ID a species, it would be best to send us one or more photos of the same at sw@seasonwatch.in, and we'll help you out! Species in the guide are arranged alphabetically according to their scientific name, and the common English or Hindi names are also provided. Use Ctrl + F to quickly search for names in this PDF

We recommend that you use this guide to match the phenophases in these images to what you see on the tree to be sure about the stage you are reporting. See next two pages for a description of what to expect on each species in this guide. We hope that you find this guide useful for your tree-observation journey!

Happy Tree-watching!
